

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to apply for the PHP Web Developer position. I am eager to transition fully into a web development role where I can apply my hands-on coding experience and continue growing as a developer.

My most recent position is IT Support Specialist in a National Government Agency; however, I have been actively involved in coding and system development. During this time, I helped build and maintain an internal system using PHP with the Laravel framework, working on both backend and frontend components. I used Blade for templating and have experience developing user interfaces with Vue.js and React. I also worked with MySQL for database management, implementing features such as data handling, system logic, and troubleshooting.

This experience strengthened my backend and frontend development skills, as well as my ability to solve real-world problems through clean and maintainable code. I am motivated, detail-oriented, and passionate about web development, and I am confident that my technical background and system-building experience would allow me to contribute effectively to your development team.

Thank you for considering my application. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss my qualifications further.

Sincerely,

JUSTINE C. MACARAYAN
